

The people that is missing	(Paul Klee)
Everything is alive	(Alexander von Humboldt)
And life has to take charge of its environment and evolve with it.	(James Lovelock)
Environment is us,	(Istvan Kenyeres)
Nature and politics cannot be separated.	(Bruno Latour)
We are here,
There is no Planet B	(Vox populi)
Artificial boundaries,
Neither the wind nor the sea know them.
Our dreams of freedom put us against each other.	(Isabelle Stengers)
A passion for abolition,	(Gilles Deleuze)
Ecocide
Ecotoxic
Economic
Echoes of a world without us;
We are only apocalyptic when we hope to be wrong.	(Günther Anders)
Man surpassed with stolid necessity for lifeless matter;	(Viveiros de Castro & Danowski)
Back to the cave.	(Bruno Latour)
Between the animal we were and the machine we will be,
We are geologic strength.	(Dipesh Chakrabarty)
Time is overwhelmed in trying to understand the problem,	(Deleuze & Guattari)
Earth is different than territory,	(Chief Seattle)
And is full of the life of our ancestors.
Only the naked man shall understand.	(Oswald de Andrade)
That money cannot be eaten.	(Chief Seattle)
The world began without man, and it will end without him;	(Claude Lévi-Strauss)
We are headed towards the unintelligibility of extinction.	(Ray Brassier)
Do we have the duty to be optimists?
Do we have the duty to be pessimists?	(Rachel Carson)
I have felt bound by a solemn obligation to do what I could
With the “Capitalocene” and its beasts In the jumble of growth	(Jason W. Moore)
Stop to think
In re-civilizing modern practice.	(Gerardo Mosquera)
No emissions
No pollution
What are our modes of abstraction doing to us?	(Isabelle Stengers)
What are they blinding us against?	(Alfred North Whitehead)
We are streams of the same water	(Alfred North Whitehead)
And the sea has memory.	(Raúl Zurita)
—I am not your commodity
—I am not just business	(Greil Marcus)
The silence of the nihilist noise
Of mortal and deadly men
Inhabits strengths that seem eternal;
But everything that was solid falls apart in the sea.	(Karl Marx)
Like the island of “I Don’t Believe it”	(Donald Trump)
Of “Drill Baby Drill”	(Michael Steele)
The island of “The Merchants of Doubt”	(Naomi Oreskes)
And of “I’m Sure I Won’t Live to See That”	(Vox populi)
Or of “Science Will Come up with Something”	(Vox populi)
But science is slow.	(Isabelle Stengers)
Dysphoria In the War of “Crisis as an Opportunity”	(Naomi Oreskes)
Where we fight, liable before us against us.
A war without winners,	(Isabelle Stengers)
The climate beast knows.	(Bruno Latour)
Do we know what is happening and what needs to be done?	(Andri Snær Magnason)
There’s no point in fighting, but in reconciliation.	(Danowski & Viveiros de Castro)
Let’s become “The People That Is Missing”	(Paul Klee)
A many people, deterritorialized, able to start a process of transformation	(Félix Guattari)
And able to learn what it needs to re-inhabit what was devastated.	(Isabelle Stengers)
The people that can make the revolution,
The revolution that is missing.	